

The Southwestern Mission Research Center Presents
Missions of the River Tour

Join us for a tour of the two Spanish colonial missions of Socorro and Ysleta, established by the Spanish settlers and Indians who fled Northern New Mexico in 1680 during the Pueblo Revolt. We will also visit a rare presidio chapel and the village of San Elizario, as well as the old adobe town of Mesilla, New Mexico. This tour will include visits to museums, the Chile Pepper Institute, and the charming J. Paul Taylor home. Enjoy sopaipillas, New Mexico red and green chile, and some Texas BBQ, yum! A little shopping along the way too. Since we are staying in the U.S. you will not need your passport.
